To whom it may concern,

I am very interested in being considered as a candidate for the Seattle Planning Commission. As an urban designer for MAKERS Architecture and Urban Design (MAKERS) and outgoing member of the Seattle Design Review Board, it is my intent to utilize my knowledge of complex planning issues as a means to facilitate conversations with board members and City departments. By participating in these conversations, I hope to advise the Mayor, City Council, and City departments on subject matter that helps to shape equitable planning approaches for the community.

As an outgoing member of the Seattle Design Review Board, I am comfortable engaging in difficult discussions in a public forum concerning subject matter that will have a lasting effect on the neighborhood. Although our task to support the design guidelines, it is essential for us to have a thorough understanding of the broader land use policy that influences the shape of each project, something that is often a point of contention with the local community. It is often these issues that are in fact why many concerned residents attend, such as building height, parking, and public spaces - issues which will continue to be brought forward for guidance with the Planning Commission. I have also used this opportunity as a board member to research ground-level residential entrances in the Capitol Hill and South Lake Union neighborhoods. This project has involved creating a survey of existing housing typologies, drafting a series of metrics to rate each entrance, and will ideally result in a series of recommendations to supplement the language of the city-wide design guidelines and potentially zoning code, with the interest of enhancing the quality of future ground-level residential entrances. Additionally, as a Get Engaged member, I have been active in the community outreach process for the City's Comprehensive Plan Update. I look forward to the opportunity to engage the review of elements from the draft Comprehensive Plan and provide recommendations if necessary.

Since joining MAKERS, my primary efforts have involved managing a small collaborative effort to use a community planning-based approach to drafting several federal master plans. Each plan included the development of neighborhood-specific urban design framework plans which included regulating plans, multi-modal transportation plans, and design guidelines to promote equitable living conditions for the installation community. Additionally, I have recently led the effort to synthesize results from the South Lake Union Urban Design Framework Plan for the update of the South Lake Union Neighborhood Design Guidelines. It was through this research that I developed a strong interest in the support of the urban design framework plan as a neighborhood-scale tool for other communities in Seattle, and the various opportunities for neighborhood-level planning policy recommendations that could emerge. I feel that these opportunities, in addition to the review of the Comprehensive Plan, are something that I would greatly appreciate the opportunity to partake in.

I am confident that I can work confidently with other commissioners to make recommendations for neighborhood-level and city-wide planning considerations. I would greatly appreciate the opportunity to meet with you and discuss other opportunities that could emerge from this position. Please do not hesitate to let me know if I can answer any additional questions, and I look forward to hearing from you.

Kindest Regards,

Michael Austin
